PREFACE

The English Finderlist of Reconstructions in Austronesian Languages was first conceived about a decade ago, at a time when comparative and historical work in Austronesian languages was increasing in momentum. It was thought that researchers in the Melanesian area especially could well do with a single, comprehensive finder list to assist them in their task of identifying the Austronesian elements in vernacular languages. The ideal answer to their problem might have been a revision and expansion of previous finder lists by a single author or team, with consistent orthography, gloss choice and exhaustive cross-referencing, but since this did not seem to be a likely prospect for some considerable time, a compendium of already existing sources offered itself as the best provisional solution. The English Finderlist of Reconstructions in Austronesian Languages was therefore planned to bring together a large number of proto-Austronesian and subgroup reconstructions which are the work of many authors and are scattered among numerous publications and still unpublished works, many of which are not readily accessible. It was intended primarily for use by the research worker new to the Austronesian area, but it was felt that it might also be of service to the experienced specialist as a handy comparative list or memory jog.

The concentration of effort in other research areas delayed intensive work on the Finderlist until about two years ago, when work began in earnest and for the first time the problems involved in the merging of several sources into a single work clearly arose to be tackled. The manner in which these problems were in fact solved has implications which the user would do well to bear in mind. The compilers would, for example, like to make it clear that this Finderlist was never intended to be a definitive work, but rather to function as a substitute for a cohesive, comprehensive finder list of the kind mentioned above. Its drawbacks stem mainly from the attempt to present several sources as one: had the source glosses been reproduced unaltered, the usefulness of the Finderlist would have suffered, while the changes which have been effected have entailed the non-inclusion of much potentially useful or interesting qualifying material. (This, however, remains accessible to the user in the original source materials indicated in the source bibliography.) This means that the Finderlist is of much more obvious use to the student of comparative phonology than to the semantic researcher, whose needs could be fully satisfied only by the compilation of a massive Comparative Index of Austronesian Reflexes, unfortunately an unrealisable dream for the immediate future.

Another question which arises is that of the relative reliability of the varying choice of glosses and reconstructions by the many authors whose results have been brought together in the Finderlist. While it would be presumptuous of the compilers to attempt to assign degrees of reliability to individual authors and their various works, they feel that the researcher new to the Austronesian field may not go very far wrong if he assumes that, especially in the broader linguistic groupings, such as PAN, POC, PEO, PPN, etc., revised work by individual authors, and, in general, the work of more recent authors based on that of their predecessors, is of a less tentative nature than, for example, early work of pioneers in the Austronesian linguistic field.

As far as the trustworthiness of the compiled Finderlist itself is concerned, exhaustive checking has eliminated a number of errors both from this work and from its sources, but it is inconceivable that in a work of this nature and magnitude some errors should not remain undetected, and for these the compilers offer their apologies. It is also to be noted that the techniques employed to render proto-forms more easily traceable are not only liable to human error but are of limited use, and the user is advised to regard them as no more than helpful adjuncts to his own experience and imagination.

It is hoped that not many important sources have been overlooked. The compilers are aware of the existence of a considerable amount of additional material in preparation such as R. Blust's envisaged very major addition to the number of proto-Austronesian reconstructions in a major contribution which he is at present preparing for publication in Oceanic Linguistics, with others to follow. Rather than holding up the publication of this Finderlist for an indefinite period with a view to the eventual inclusion of such materials into it, it has been decided to proceed with its publication now, and it is hoped that such additional materials may be included in a Supplement to this Finderlist, to be published in Series D of Pacific Linguistics when appropriate. Such a Supplement will also contain reconstructions already at hand in extant sources which, for a variety of reasons, could not be included in the Finderlist. So, for instance, Dahl's own ten first proto-Austronesian reconstructions in Dahl 1973 (of the seventeen marked as Dahl's own in that publication, seven had already been suggested by Blust earlier in Blust 1970,1972a,1973) unfortunately became available to the compilers too late at a time when the typesetting of the Finderlist had already been well under way.

Thanks are due firstly to those authors who made available for inclusion in the Finderlist their work while it was still unpublished, though intended for publication. Assistance in the compilation work was received from many quarters, but especial thanks are due to Mr Peter Mühlhäusler and the Rev. Günther Renck who helped with translation difficulties, to Dr Bob Blust, whose suggestions on the shape of the Finderlist proved to be very valuable, to Dr D. Laycock, whose advice was sought on practically every aspect of the work from its inception, and last but not least, to Mrs Sally Sinisoff, Senior Linguistics Assistant, who had the unenviable and painstaking task of type-setting the extremely complex pages of the work, using a great variety of special fonts, and who also played a major role in determining its final format and in detecting and removing many inconsistencies and errors which had escaped the compilers' notice.

INTRODUCTION

The function of the Finderlist is to lead the user as quickly as possible to a specific reconstruction within a certain semantic range. To facilitate this a layout involving clarity, simplicity and economy has been evolved, largely by B. Wilson, and this again determines the treatment of the source material. It will be noted that there is an English to proto-language section only. One reason for this is that reversal, to be of any use, would entail the immensely difficult task of regularising diverse orthography systems. Another is that reversal is of comparatively little use to the researcher seeking a hazily envisaged and hypothetical proto-form underlying a word in a given vernacular. As far as the layout of entries is concerned, a glance at the body of the book will show that each page is divided vertically into three sections. To the left of these columns are the glosses, followed in most cases by supplementary information (cross-references, etc.), while underneath are ranged in facing columns the relevant reconstructions and their codes. This layout presents a dense, easily-read format. Punctuation and type vary according to function (to be discussed later), and entries follow in alphabetical order (modifications of this general rule will be pointed out in other sections).

The Finderlist has a considerable historical content in so far as it shows (for example) the development of the Proto-Austronesian reconstructed forms of Dempwolff and others in daughter-proto-languages. There was no original intention to tamper with the sources, but as work progressed it became evident that a policy of non-interference would adversely affect the compilation and hence the usefulness of the Finderlist. It was therefore decided to sacrifice a certain amount of fidelity to source in the interests of workability. Treatment of source material can be discussed in terms of the layout of the work, that is, under the headings of GLOSSES, RECONSTRUCTIONS, and CODES.

GLOSSES

Entries for inclusion in the Finderlist were copied in their original form from lists or from their various scattered positions in primary sources. During the work of compilation, however, it was found necessary to make certain omissions and alterations to a number of glosses so that they might be more easily grouped with associated glosses. The simplest problem in this was that of spelling, for which the Oxford Dictionary was adopted as the norm. A slight problem was encountered in the case of authors who did not supply glosses for their proto-forms, and in the case of works which are printed in German. Dyen and Milke, for example, in some of their studies give glosses for each cognate but not for the reconstructed form itself. In these cases the most representative gloss or glosses have been adopted for inclusion in the Finderlist, or (very rarely) a covering gloss has been supplied by the compilers. In the case of translation from German, semantic differences between English and German have necessitated the use of alternate (and cross-referenced) translations for single German glosses and vice versa. For example:

laku' (wandeln) = wander, walk, go;
 mlymiy (befeuchten, spritzen) = sprinkle, spray, wet, urinate;
 libut (Sturm) }
 gəlap (Unwetter) } = storm.

It will also be noticed in these cases that the translations 'go' and 'urinate' are strictly speaking incorrect. It has been considered useful to supply them for the purpose of easy comparison because a) other authors have given them for basically the same reconstructions and b) the meanings are explicitly those of some of the reflexes on which the author in question has based his reconstructed form. Translations from German are generally the original work of the compilers, but in the translating of Dempwolff's Vergleichende Lautlehre des Austronesischen Wortschatzes constant reference was also made to the Laycock-Tryon translation of 1971 and other sources giving translation. In sources containing gloss translations obvious errors have been corrected or omitted. In problematic cases where it was felt that apparently incorrect glosses might be correct glosses based on fresh evidence, a cross-reference is given to the more usual gloss for the reconstruction concerned. It was an arduous task for the compilers to decide on the extent of their interference in all these cases.

Efforts were made to avoid reduplicated entry of reversible glosses. For example, 'carry on shoulder' takes its place with the other 'carry' entries, there being no such entry under 'shoulder'; there is, however, a cross-reference from 'shoulder'. Glosses in reverse order have in fact been avoided except for those consisting of adjective and noun where the adjective is not obviously of prime importance, e.g. 'lip, lower', rather than 'lower lip'. There are a very few other exceptions to the rule, mainly with some entries one element of which is have, become or make. The slight inconsistency arising is considered of little importance compared to the benefit of finding all relevant reconstructions in one place only.

In order that the workable format of the Finderlist should be preserved, information supplementary to the glosses has been omitted and substituted with other techniques only if this seemed necessary: square brackets used by Zorc to indicate approximate semantic range are either omitted or replaced by the word 'species' in relevant cases, for example, [spirit] is entered under 'spirit', [eel] under 'eel (species)'; Brandstetter's 'word root' qualifications are also omitted, the reconstruction num, for example, being glossed simply 'drink'. It has also been normal practice not to indicate parts of speech, since this is usually obvious:

head (n.) } are all entered as 'head' head, a } big big (adj.) } are all entered as 'big' big, to be } hit hit (v.) } are all entered as 'hit'.

hit, to }

The use of cross-reference is usually enough to dispel any ambiguity: pommel (pound, massage). But in any case, since the Finderlist is concerned primarily with the form of reconstructions and only in the second place with their semantics, entries assigned different grammatical values are very frequently coalesced: bend (n.+v.). (However, if the parts of speech are clearly indicated in all sources, the distinction is maintained, e.g. harrow (n.) and harrow (v.) are separate entries.) This technique is the more justified by the fact that the source author himself has in many instances been hard put to choose a grammatical value for his reconstructed form. Words which were easily assigned distinct grammatical glosses (chisel[plane, adzel], chisel[engrave, cut]) have been treated in the manner of homographs (discussion follows).

The preceding discussion has touched on some of the minor difficulties encountered in moulding items from separate sources into a single work of uniform format. The essence of the problem lies in the presence of variation of form with only minimal variation of significance. Slight variation in meaning may actually exist between the glosses of reconstructions, or it may be indicated as a possibility by the variation of specificity in the researchers' glosses, or again there may be no variation in meaning, but differences between the forms of the glosses chosen. In all of these cases there is one effect: reconstructions are unnecessarily difficult to trace. The problem can be discussed in terms of homographs, synonyms and near-untraceable glosses.

HOMOGRAPHS

Strict alphabetical ordering causes homographs to be jumbled together. This possible source of confusion was removed by the use of numbering and synonym cross-reference as illustrated in these simplified examples:

*wind*¹ (twist)

*wind*² (breeze)

*box*¹ (chest)

*box*² (fight)

*box*³ (pandanus)

Subsidiary entries are permitted to follow in alphabetical order, whether this entails intermingling or not; though this is a very infrequent occurrence:

wind bringing rain

wind direction

wind, east etc.

SYNONYMS

As a matter of policy most glosses have been simplified into a near-telegraphic style to save space and make for easy comprehension. Unnecessarily cryptic glosses have, however, been avoided. The technique of gloss simplification lends itself well to further, and more essential, use for the standardisation of slightly varying glosses with the same significance. Variations in the choice of gloss by different authors are very frequent. Slight variations can easily be removed without impairment of the basic form or significance of individual source glosses:

To carry on the shoulder
To carry on one's shoulder } become Carry on shoulder.

The form of some glosses suffers more than that of others: Right (as opposed to 'left') becomes Right (hand/side). Frequently it has been found useful to indicate the main variations offered in the sources by use of bracketing or apposition: LUNG(S); WIND, WIND AROUND; but if this were to prove clumsy the practice has been dropped: Join, join to, join together, join with, join on are represented as join. More radical differences in the form of near-synonyms can needlessly separate cognate sets. This problem was tackled in two ways: firstly by cross-reference, as in the case of glue, gum, adhesive and paste; secondly by the placing of all reconstructions of a given group of synonyms under one representative entry, especially if the great majority of reconstructed forms follow the same pattern or patterns. This is the case with path, road, way and trail, most reconstructions for which follow a pattern representable by Dempwolff's daian, d'aian and all reconstructions for which are listed under path. This technique for rendering the Finderlist more useful contravenes the policy of non-interference with sources rather drastically, and so was not always used where it might have been. On the other hand, the editors would also like to apologize for any over-use of the technique. It was felt to be not merely justified but also absolutely called for in a few cases, one of which was the personal pronouns. As copied from their sources, these were found under various scattered headings representing every conceivable case. They are now tabulated under I, You (singular and plural), He, We, They. My, Thee, etc. have been included only as empty cross-reference glosses. Pronominal subdivisions have been entered alphabetically by dual, plural, singular, trial, etc., except that we (inclusive) precede we (exclusive) entries. Pronoun forms unglossed in their sources have been entered as such, but may normally be assumed to represent subject or focal forms.

NEAR-UNTRACEABLE GLOSSES (INCLUDING PLANT + ANIMAL SPECIES)

Glosses composed in proto-language to English order were sometimes not intended by their authors for reversal. This may mean that semantically precise glosses (now in reverse order) are difficult to trace for the user armed with no more than an idea of the general semantic area of the reconstruction he is seeking. Such entries have very occasionally been removed (if they are also glossed under a synonym of more common occurrence). More often they are allowed to remain and are cross-referenced from a synonym entry, in order to distinguish this synonym from its homograph, or to give the user some notion of a slight extension in semantic range, or, last but by no means least, so as not to interfere with the source material. Entries which are difficult to trace such as 'take a newly decorated canoe on a sea voyage' are retained and cross-referenced from such more obvious entries in the same semantic range as 'launch', 'maiden voyage', 'put out to sea' (the first two cross-reference glosses here being empty glosses with no reconstructions).

Plant and animal species of the larger groups which are specified (that is, given their recognised name) are entered alphabetically, but also listed for reference under the relevant generic term, viz.:

TREE AND SHRUB SPECIES, specified	} Here follow the species names - Casuarina, Alocasia, Hornbill, etc.
PLANT AND HERB SPECIES, specified
BIRD SPECIES, specified
FISH SPECIES, specified
MARINE ANIMAL, specified

The arrangement of this pattern of entry breaks the alphabetical ordering rule of the Finderlist. For example, in the case of the 'bird' entries:

1. BIRD
2. BIRD SPECIES, specified
3. BIRD SPECIES, glossed, e.g. BIRD - BELIEVED TO BRING OMENS; etc.
4. BIRD SPECIES, unspecified (unnamed reconstructions)
5. BIRD CALL, etc. - other entries beginning with 'bird'.

Where a reconstruction may designate either a species or a generic term, and it is not necessary to draw the distinction, the gloss assumes the following form: BAMBOO (SPECIES).

CLOSING REMARKS ON THE TREATMENT OF GLOSSES: CROSS-REFERENCE AND THE FORM OF GLOSSES

Most main entries, and occasional subsidiary ones, are supplied with at least one cross-reference gloss. These glosses are sometimes abbreviated to save space. They may have either or both of two functions: (1) To clarify the meaning of otherwise ambiguous glosses, and in consequence to distinguish between homographs, such as box (case), box (fight), box (pandanus); (2) To indicate to the user the presence of near-synonyms or other useful related entries in the body of the Finderlist. Two forms of cross-reference are employed, the simple bracket form and the see also form. Near-synonyms either in English or in the proto-language are normally given in parentheses, while other glosses of possible use or interest which are in the same general semantic area, or which are in a different semantic area but contain glosses of the same essential form, are cross-referenced in the second manner. The second technique was introduced at quite a late stage into the work, and a certain amount of overlapping takes place.

The user of the Finderlist would do well to bear in mind that full cross-referencing is not practicable in a work of the present format: it would inevitably lead to entries being made unwieldy by containing more cross-references than reconstructions. It is rather intended as a guideline for use, and the researcher is advised not to rely on it alone, but to explore every possible area before abandoning the search for any reconstructed form.

The presentation form of the glosses was carefully chosen to obviate ambiguity. Variations in punctuation and type face correspond with differences in the significance of parts of glosses. Examples of the patterns are as follows:

(1) Main Gloss

SIBLING (upper case Script)

(2) Main Gloss plus Qualification (usually in form of reversal)

SIBLING, elder (separated by comma, qualification lower case)

SIBLING (opposite sex) (in parentheses)

SHELF FOR FOOD (all upper case, qualification regarded as part of total gloss, or whole gloss regarded as unit)

(3) Alternative Glosses

SHADE, SHADOW (separated by comma, apposition gloss also upper case)

LUNG(S) (bracketed part also upper case)

PATH (incl. entries for ROAD, WAY, TRAIL) (begins indented on following line, type face Artisan, alternatives in upper case)

(4) Cross-Reference

ACCUSE (blame) (bracketed, lower case)

ATTACK (type-face Artisan, cross-reference see also AMBUSH upper case, begins indented on line below gloss)

WAY
see PATH

A few obvious abbreviations are used, e.g. v., n. Past participle forms are indicated in three or four cases by (p.p.).

Alphabetisation is normal except that main entries must always precede subsidiary regardless of the alphabetical value of the second element of the gloss. For example:

- (1) DRIVE (hunt)
- (2) DRIVE ALONG
- (3) DRIVE AWAY

RECONSTRUCTIONS

Reconstructions, like glosses, have been divested of superfluous qualifying material so that they may be easily read and compared. Techniques (asterisks, remarks in parentheses, etc.) indicating such features as the ultimate non-Austronesian origin of reconstructions, degrees of certainty about their accuracy, and location in other sources have not been employed. But if such features happen to be indicated in a code, the code is preserved in its entirety.

Provided that orthography is identical, reconstructions with the same gloss occurring in different works by a single author have not been reduplicated. Instead, only that occurring in the work regarded as the more representative is cited with its code, the compilers being of the opinion that citation of all codes representing the various sources of a reconstruction in an individual author's work is both unnecessary and clumsy. In the case of Dempwolff, forms differentiated only by the use of the spiritus asper are regarded as identical (e.g. lima' = lima), but otherwise the slightest differences in orthography are regarded as essential, even where the value is identical (e.g. both qariki [PPNBIWO (PN)] and ?ariki [PPNBITER] are entered). Identical reconstructions with varying glosses have of course been entered, t'it'ip, for example, being entered under both feign (PAND) and oblique (PANDF). Position in the code list usually indicates the relative importance of an author's works. For example, PAND precedes PANDF precedes PANDLRD etc., and items which, for example, are to be found both in PAND and PANDF are given a PAND code only. There is one major exception to this rule. Blust 1970 is a revised and enlarged version of Blust 1971 (the paradoxical dating being due to publication lag), so that practically no entries in the Finderlist should bear the Blust 1971 code. Since, however, the latter was the first to be prepared for entry in the Finderlist, it has been entered in full, while only differing and supplementary items from Blust 1970 now appear entered.

Standardisation of reconstruction orthography was considered but rejected on grounds of difficulty. The presentation of a key to the mutual equivalence of symbols has been decided against for the same reason, the problem being not one of different symbols, but of different systems. Some minor changes have, however, been imposed: obvious errors (misprints, errors in transcription) have been corrected; limited bracketing has been used to telescope many alternate forms in Dempwolff's earlier work, danum and ndanum, for example, being given as (n)danum; elements of some orthographical systems have been repositioned to fit more easily into dense format, $l\text{pu}_r^D$, for example, becoming lipu(Dr); unavailability of certain printing elements has led to the substitution of symbols by the most similar available printing symbols, so that Dempwolff's spiritus asper ['] and Stresemann's ['] are both rendered by ['], all "question-mark" type glottal stops by [ʔ] and Anthropos [q] by the more common [ŋ].

CODES

Codes are ranged in vertical columns opposite their relevant reconstructions. A dash under a code implies its repetition. Rendered in upper case Gothic, codes may be broken down into at most four parts, e.g.

proto-language	/	author	/	source	/	subgroup
PPN	/	BI	/	WO	/	NP
Proto-poly-	/	Biggs	/	Working	/	Nuclear Poly-nesian				Papers in		nesian
				Linguistics

That is, PPNBIWO(NP) signifies explicitly proto-nuclear-Polynesian reconstructions by Biggs in Working Papers in Linguistics. Some of the codes lack either or both of the final two elements, for example, PAND - proto-Austronesian / Dempwolff. Codes for four authors offered a slight problem. The Blust codes were devised by different research helpers at different times and as a result show a measure of inconsistency. For example, 'Blust' may be rendered either by B or by BL. R.D. Zorc's Proto-Philippine Finder List posed a more difficult problem. This is both a primary and a secondary source, containing a large number of reconstructions which are also recorded in The English Finderlist of Reconstructions in Austronesian Languages. Duplicated entries were avoided. This entailed either non-inclusion of reconstructions and their codes or non-inclusion of part of a code only. For example, lahuk ('mix') PPHZDLF is coded PPHZD,F since Zorc's L represents a Dyen source already entered in the Finderlist. Where the last item of the code represents a source already entered under the same gloss, neither reconstruction nor code has been used. Dempwolff codes, except where both final and duplicating, have always been retained for the purpose of comparison. In cases where Zorc's version of Dempwolff deviates enough in reconstructed form or gloss from the Finderlist version to serve as a valuable supplement, it has been included. (It will be noted that reconstructions termed Proto-Philippine by Zorc may be specified as proto-Austronesian in the primary source, also that an oblique stroke in the code indicates mutual research, while a comma indicates a further ramification or correction on the part of the names which follow.) Charles' proto-Malayo-Polynesian, which is distinguished from proto-Austronesian, has been coded as PMP, while Stresemann's Malayo-Polynesische Ursprache has been abbreviated as PAN, with a view to updating his terminology. Brandstetter's Gemeinindonesisch has been rendered by PIN.

In determining the sequence in which the codes (and hence reconstructions) should be ordered, the compilers, broadly speaking, gave priority a) to the general over the specific in language groupings (also indicating a general move from West to East), b) to the more well-known over the less well-known (and often later) authors, and c) to the more recent publications over the earlier work of individual authors, while attempting to keep all the works of individual authors as little separated as possible. These criteria of precedence were of course often in conflict, but it is hoped the resulting order may present a plausible pattern. A complete list of the codes, in the order as it occurs in the body of the text, is given overleaf with proto-language section titles. If such a section contains only a single proto-language, the language code constitutes the section title.
